FIFTY YEARS OF

"Old Pete" Rose, Who Was May Eighty-six Yesterday, Has this Record.

STAND. THE ASTOR HOUSE.

Shook Hands with Lafayette, May President Polk, Governor Marcy and President Taylor.

TAMMANY MAN SINCE 1825.

And Voted for Bryan in the Last Election—Is Vigorous and Active and Hopes to Pass the Century Mark.

To be eighty-six years old and yet to feel | Sep that life is not worth living unless you can get up at 3 o'clock in the morning, go lown to the old place where you have been in buisness for fifty years, and ply your trade there whether the skies smile or August weep, is almost as good as having drunk July deep of the fountain of perpetual youth.

This is how Peter Henry Rose, the oldest vspaper vender in the city, probably, felt yesterday morning on the dawn of his eighty-sixth birthday. He jumped out of bed as nimbly almost as a boy of twenty, and at his accustomed hour was selling papers as usual in front of the Astor House, near the corner of Vesey street. In appearance Mr. Rose suggests an eminciated likeness of the Abbe Liszt. His white hair. like that of the great musician, has been suffered to grow long until it falls in a heavy mass upon his shoulders.

He has been selling papers in the vicinity of St. Paul's Church for fifty years. His memory is so good that he can reel off stories by the hour of his varied experiences during that period.

Thirty-six years ago Rose had his stand igninst the Vescy street railing of St. Paul's Church and numbered among his customers such well-known New Yorkers as Fernando Wood, John McKeen and "Slippery Dick" Connolly. There were in those days solld downtown merchants who made a dally point of walking each aftermade a daily point of walking each afternoon as far north as Vessy street in order to purchase their papers of Rose.

"Those were the days when I made money," said the old vender yesterday,
'and there used to be hot old times around my stand. I remember when McCiellan was nominated I tore down a flag that I had above my stand and waying it in the air, gave three cheers, One of my customers shouted out that if I were a McCiellan man he wouldn't trade with me any more. I told him to go to thunder.

"I have always been a Tammany Hall Democrat. I voted for Bryan in the last election and for General Jackson for a second term. I'm with the people always.

Mr. Rose is living the evening of his life with his daughter. rs. Post, at No. 22C East Eighty-first street. He is, he says, in appendid health, and expects to live to pass the century mark.
